This allows students to use more space when drawing/coloring pictures. I like this activity because students get to choose events they feel are most important in the literary work and stand out to them. I like to have students present their work to the class, or I will post student work in the classroom and have a gallery walk-through.

With a shaking hand the Professor, as quickly as he could manage, removed the stone from the packet and lifted it to his mouth. It looked as though he was furiously trying to swallow it down, but was having some difficulty with simply swallowing at the current moment. That was when Harry realised, with alarm, exactly what was going on with Snape.
